Captain Eastwood has written home that during his recent trip through China and Japan and through Korea, when he noticed in the coach with him a woman who was unmistakably an American. The meeting of two Americans in that far country is not such an ordinary event that they pass each other without a greeting. So as soon as the captain saw the stranger he hurried to his corner of the car, and to his utter amazement found that it was a former Topeka man, and a person who was distantly related to his family. It proved to be the Rev. Ned Adams, who is a missionary in the far east. The two had volumes to say to each other, news items to exchange, and old friends and events to discuss all through the remainder of the journey. Each of the men wrote to their homes in this country, and when the families compared notes it appeared that to the captain's mind, Adams was the most interesting man he had ever met—indeed he had never had such a good time in his life, and on the other hand, Mr. Adams had written to his people that Earl McFarland was an extraordinarily intelligent, engaging and entertaining talker, and it had been the greatest pleasure to meet him. The praise was sincere on both sides—it was the first time either of them had met an American traveler in their journeys, to say nothing of an old friend from the same town.

Thursday evening it was made public when Mr. and Mrs. Kelly went for a trip to Colorado. Upon their return they will make their home in Topeka.

The regular weekly dinner dance will be given tonight at the Country club.

A stag party was hastily planned one evening this week. The idea of giving the party entered the mind of Mr. Charles Craig, who is now in Denver, Colorado, and he had the meal immediately called up a number of his friends, and all agreed to come. There was just one man he couldn't get to come, and that was Mr. Miller, in whose honor the party was to be given. After telephoning to every one of the known haunts of the would-be guest of honor, the host decided to give the party without him. The affair was a success and not seriously damaged by the gloom of the honored one was notified that a party would be given for him the previous evening, for which he expressed due gratitude and regrets for his absence. One can only trust that he will be able to attend for the wedding, so that the festivities will not have to proceed without him. Regrets expressed on the receipt of a belated notice might not mend the break so easily in that case.

EVENING CHAT

BY RUTH CAMERON.

"Babyology" is the newest subject to be introduced into the public schools. Philadelphia is the mother of this innovation.

Medical instructors, assisted by trained nurses, are showing the girls how to dress a baby, how to prepare its food and bottle, and how a baby should be washed.

These things have their place of course, but they merely water the ground, while the school training goes straight to the roots.

I think this course in babyology ought to be instituted in the schools of every large city of the land and I think it ought to be supplemented by many more scientific homemaking courses.

In Boston a group of young society girls, made up of the graduates from a domestic science school, have formed themselves into a club called the "Boston Homemaking club." Their purpose is to translate what they have learned into its simplest terms, to the benefit of the uneducated people whom they feel need it so much.

One course is in food values. Could anything be sadder than to see the people who ought to get the fullest nutriment value from their scanty supply of money ignorantly buying the least nutritious foods as they usually do.

The death roll of those in the slums, the primary cause of whose death is simply improper nourishment, is enormous. If these people knew how much nutriment there is in many cheap things such as peas and beans and rice and macaroni, not only would the death roll be enormously reduced, but the indignity of those who, although they do not actually die, are always on the verge of uselessness because of improper nourishment, would be vastly lessened.

Think how much industrial training along these lines would do to help the next generation. Not that does not solve today's problem, but in addition to the task of beautifying the ugly spots of today, I think we have also the duty of planting shade trees for the next generation.

Another course is to be in meat buying—another in the buying of materials. Another is in tasteful house furnishing. The girls hope to show how a home may be attractively furnished by thoughtfully and tastefully expending no larger a sum than the installment plan firm requires to furnish complete in all the horrors of stuffy furniture and gilded framed chromos.

I wish that all these courses and several more along the same lines might be instituted in the public schools of every city in the land.

Don't you think that the advisability and the possibility of putting some
